The "G. d'Annunzio" University of Chieti and Pescara

The University was founded in 1965 as a "Libera Università" and transitioned to state ownership in 1982. Today, it comprises 16 Departments and 3 Schools. The university operates across 2 campuses: Chieti, which serves as the registered office and houses the Rector's offices and General Directorate, and Pescara.

THE TERRITORY

Abruzzo city of just under 50 thousand inhabitants, Chieti is divided into two parts: the Chieti scalo district is located in the Val Pescara, while the hilly historic center is surrounded by the Alento and Pescara rivers. Both the mountains and the sea are within walking distance, and this makes the Theatine town a very interesting tourist destination.

Chieti Alta represents the historic city center, while Chieti scalo is to the north and welcomes industries. Furthermore, many students live here who attend the campus of the University of Studies named after Gabriele d'Annunzio which is based in via dei Vestini.

Pescara is a relatively modern city because the city was originally two small fishing villages, which were merged by the fascist government in 1927. The river Pescara that divides the city into North and South as it flows down from the mountains has also shaped the city's history.

The city is attracting an increasing number of visitors who enjoy swimming in the warm waters of the Adriatic and finding a tasty seafood lunch down by the harbour in one of the fisherman's huts/restaurants. Others adore picking up some designer names in the city centre, before reclining with a coffee in the elegant Piazza della Rinascita. And there are those who can barely wait for the sun to set before hitting the cocktail bar and the beach-side nightclubs.
